About presentation training from Four

In today's working environment staff at all levels are asked to make presentations to groups of people inside and outside their company or organisation. Delivering these presentations with impact to achieve memorable results can be the key to winning new business, securing financial investment or simply being seen as an effective team leader.

Specialist presentation training will help you develop your presence in order to connect with and inspire your audience. This will help you build trust and credibility so that your presentations are clear and energetic. You want your seat at the table to count.

At Four Communications we have extensive presentation training experience to help you command attention, engage your audience, and leave a lasting impression. The training can be conducted individually or in groups.

Case study

Alitalia

Four Communications organised presentation training for over 200 senior pilots and executives at Alitalia, the Italian airline, in order to launch a new internal cascade communications programme. Six two hour sessions, communicated in Italian and English, were held to equip the senior management team with the necessary skills to communicate a challenging new strategic plan for the company.
